

'Get A Divorce' Lawyer Stars In Racy Billboard, Playboy

WMAQ-TV

updated 3:22 p.m. ET Jan. 13, 2008

CHICAGO - If the racy "Life Is Short, Get A Divorce" billboards didn't draw your attention to Corri Fetman and her divorce law practice, maybe her new venture with Playboy will.

Images: Celebs Who Posed In Playboy

Images: Billboards Promote Divorce?

Fetman revealed this week that not only is she the new "Lawyer of Love" columnist at Playboy.com, but she was the scantily clad female body that posed for the billboard. The male body was that of her personal trainer, she said.

Fetman debuted on the Web site Friday, promoting her column with a nude pictorial.

"It was the best time I ever had with my clothes on or off," Fetman, 44, told the Chicago Sun-Times about her photo shoot. "This was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to pose for the premiere men's magazine in the world."

Fetman's now trying to get out a new billboard, featuring a woman in a dominatrix outfit, saying, "Take Control. Get A Divorce," the Sun-Times reported.

The self-described "funny, witty and blunt" divorce lawyer said she will continue to deliver her message that people should get out of unhappy marriages, and she's ready for any criticism that comes her way.

She's not degrading women or her colleagues in law, she claims.

"The naked body is a beautiful thing," she told the Sun-Times. "I shouldn't be punished for having brains and a body."